

NICU Smock Pattern Peices

This is the pattern pieces ONLY the full photo tutorial & directions can be found on my blog here.

I drafted this pattern after my cousin's little boy Benjamin was born months early weighing in at 2lbs 8oz I searched everywhere for preemie cloths to fit! Babies less than 3lbs are considered 'micro-preemie' & you can actually find some stuff on the internet to buy made, but not many patterns. So after looking at different things I drafted up a pattern for a NICU friendly preemie smock that fits a good range of sizes. When babies are in the NICU it really helps the parents to see their little ones wearing some sort of clothing. BUT with all the monitors & wires many clothes are difficult to get on, or they get in the way of the wires or the nurses... which is what makes these so great!

I do not want to sell this pattern because I did not create it so people could make them to sell or I could profit off of it, but to encourage people to help others out. For that reason this pattern is free for personal and charity sewing only. This pattern, the pieces along with the instructions & photos, are copyrighted & may not be sold or reproduced without the written consent from the owner of Everything Your Mama Made & More! Feel free to link people back to the blog where they can access it for free.

Before sewing items to donate to the hospital (this or others) PLEASE contact them first & ask what they need... you may need to bring this in to show them before they can give you an answer. Some hospitals are very strict about what they can take.

If you have any questions feel free to send me a quick email kymyonwhidbey@gmail.com or visit my blog www.everythingyourmamamade.com.

Happy Sewing!
